What these are, and what I need you to push

Pops, I built three things for us. Each one is ready to move. Here is what each is and the one thing I need from you on it. The pattern is simple: I build it, you push it with your authority on the committee and at the school.

1. Final Six Strategy

What it is: the plan for locking the last 6 teams to complete the 16-team field, in a way that grows the tournament instead of just filling slots. The move is to land one big-name program first (the name that makes the whole field read national again), then add a couple of recent champions and a couple of real draws.

Your role: you're the one who can get these coaches on the phone and extend the invites. Tell me who you're going after and I'll track every one from invite to confirmed.

2. Revenue Share Proposal

What it is: the ask for the Vanguard basketball program to get a cut of Kingdom revenue for hosting. It's written for the principal, not aggressive, just the logic: we provide the gym, we run it, our team is the opening-night draw, and hosting fees are standard. The money stays separate from the Kingdom account.

Your role: review it with me, then get it to the principal so she can fight for it with the committee on our behalf. I just need your okay and her name to drop in.

3. Booster Club Framework

What it is: the basics for standing up the booster club, roles, how the money works, and the hard rule that booster money and Kingdom money never touch (separate accounts, separate books).

Your role: once you lock in your president, hand her this. It's her starting playbook.

The role split (so we're clear)

- I build the systems (the site is already live at thekingdomofthesun.com, plus the sponsor, coach, media, brand, and legacy systems behind it).
- You push them with your weight, the committee, the principal, the coaches.

All three of these are ready to move whenever you are. Tell me where you want to start and I'll get the next piece in your hands.
