

Kingdom of the Sun

Vanguard Basketball Booster Club · Starter Framework

Built 2026-06-01. The basics of how a booster club operates, kept clean and separate from the Kingdom tournament account. For BJ / Coach Jones to set up with the incoming president. Not legal or tax advice; confirm structure with the school and an accountant before opening accounts.

What it is (and is not)

- Is: a parent/community organization that raises money and volunteers to support the Vanguard basketball program (the team), separate from the tournament.
- Is not: the Kingdom of the Sun. The Kingdom is the tournament, its own entity with its own account. The booster club supports the school program. Keep these two completely separate, separate accounts, separate books, separate purposes. This separation is the single most important rule.

What it does

- Fundraising for the program (uniforms, gear, travel, meals, training, facility needs)
- Volunteers for games and events (concessions, gate, setup)
- Community building around the team (parents, alumni, local supporters)
- Optionally, supports the program's role in hosting the Kingdom (volunteer labor), without mixing the money

Basic structure (keep it small to start)

| Role                                 | Does what                                                                                                             |
|--------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| President (the incoming lady) | Leads, sets the agenda, the public face, coordinates with the coach                                                   |
| Treasurer                     | Holds the money, keeps the books, signs checks, reports monthly. Separate from the president (two-person money |

| Role                          | Does what                               |
|-------------------------------|-----------------------------------------|
|                               | control)                                |
| Secretary              | Notes, membership list, communications  |
| Volunteers / committee | Concessions, events, fundraising drives |

Start with President + Treasurer + Secretary. Add as it grows.

How the money works (the part that matters most)

1. Separate bank account, in the booster club's name, never run through the Kingdom account or a personal account.
2. Two-person control: the treasurer manages, a second officer reviews. Two signatures on anything large.
3. Simple monthly report: money in, money out, balance. Shared at meetings. Transparency prevents every problem a booster club can have.
4. Income sources: membership dues, fundraisers, local sponsorships for the program (kept distinct from Kingdom sponsors), concessions.
5. Spending: approved by vote for anything beyond small routine costs, always toward the program's stated purpose.

Legal / tax (decide early, with help)

- Most booster clubs register as a 501(c)(3) nonprofit (tax-exempt, donations deductible) or operate as a school-affiliated booster under the district's umbrella. Each has rules.
- Talk to the school/district first (some require boosters to operate under district policy) and an accountant about 501(c)(3) vs school-affiliated.
- Get an EIN, open the bank account in the club's name, keep clean records from day one.

First 5 steps to stand it up

1. Name it (e.g., "Vanguard Basketball Booster Club") and confirm the district's booster rules.
2. Lock President + Treasurer + Secretary.
3. Decide 501(c)(3) vs school-affiliated (with the accountant).
4. Get the EIN and open the separate bank account.
5. Set a simple monthly meeting + the first fundraiser.

The one-line rule

Kingdom money and booster money never touch. Different accounts, different books, different purpose. Keep that line clean and the rest is easy.
